

Multi-Paragraph Document

Introduction

This is the first paragraph of the introduction section. It contains multiple sentences that flow together naturally. The goal is to test how well paragraph boundaries are detected.

This is the second paragraph. It should be separated from the first one by a blank line in the output. Proper paragraph detection is crucial for readability.

Main Content

The main content section starts here. This paragraph discusses the primary topic of the document. It has several sentences.

Here is another paragraph within the main content. It provides additional details and context. Good extraction preserves these paragraph boundaries.

A third paragraph adds even more information. Each paragraph should remain distinct in the extracted output.

Conclusion

The conclusion wraps up the document. It summarizes the key points discussed above.
